Emmanuel, our king and lawgiver, long-awaited Savior of the nations: Come and save us, O Lord our God.

Christmas is always a time for being cheerful, loving and kind. Whatever difficulties each of us has, each of us should be buoyant with joy during this season. That's what we want to be. Joyous that God came to us in Christ to proclaim His love for us. Sometimes gloom penetrates our attitudes and robs us of the happiness in our relationship with God. Let this not be,

Were it not for Christmas and the love and hope of the Good News that Christ has come among us, there would be no Saint Joseph's College, or a Notre Dame, or any other college committed to that Infant born at Bethlehem. But the infant Jesus did come. The message to all of us in His coming should cheer us. Those of us in the educational apostolate are joyful that we have this annual opportunity to declare and to submit that our lives, our labor and our love will continue to be shared with those who came to live with us and reflect with us on life's meaning. Particularly what it means to live a life in a world that Christ has asked us to help save.

Let us this Christmas ask God to show us ways of discarding the fears and anxieties that beset us. Let us ask him to breathe His spirit of peace within us, that we can, each of us, radiate our joyous fellowship with Him in all we do to help Him save the world.

Sincerely in Christ.

Alumni Offer Valuable Tips To Current Pre-Law Students

"The first year they scare you to death, the second year they work you to death, and the third year they bore you to death."

This observation on the three years of law school was given by one of the panel of eight law students assembled for "Law Day" recently at Saint Joseph's College. Law Day was organized by Dr. William Downard of the history department in order to give pre-law students information on getting into law school, how to choose a school, financing, and how to make it through once they get there.

OSTERFELD

DOWNARD

In addition to the panel, the principal speaker was Robert Newman of the Cincinnati Legal Aid Society. Newman was invited here be Dr. David Osterfeld, Saint Joseph's assistant professor of political science.

Legal aid lawyers are paid by the government and generally represent only poor people, Newman said. Partly because of this fact, he added, "a legal aid lawyer can recognize what is wrong in the legal system and try to remedy it."

After Newman's presentation, the panel, seven of whom were SJC graduates, discussed becoming a lawyer — starting with gaining admission to law school. It was generally agreed that a student's score on the Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) and his undergraduate grade point average are two of the most important factors considered by admissions offices. Showing a genuine interest in the school is also important. Sending one or more letters of recommendation, even if they are not requested, was advised.

With regard to the LSAT, it was noted that it cannot really be prepared for: unlike the College Board exams taken in high school, the LSAT is more of a test of one's reasoning process than of basic knowledge. It is a good idea to go over a sample test beforehand to get an idea of the directions for each and to get a feel for the kind of questions which will be asked before the test so that you can be relaxed enough to think clearly. "Too many people fail the test even though they know the material because they simply 'freeze' in the test situation," one of the panel members advised.

As for the first year of law school, the observation about being "scared to death" met with agreement from most of the members of the panel. "It seems as if they've made a mistake in admitting you and you're surrounded by all these brilliant people," commented one student. "The atmosphere is very, very competitive, especially for women," added another.

Once you get in, the panel said, staying in is up to you. It is best to do your own studying (without relying on summaries, etc.), do it the right way first, and then you can see what shortcuts you can take without hurting yourself.

As for college courses in preparation for law school, accounting was mentioned several times as a big help in later courses on tax laws, etc. Majors in which emphasis is placed on writing — history, English, political science — or at least a course in which writing is of prime importance were encouraged, because, it was stressed, a law student must know how to write.

There are also opportunities for those in the sciences with oil companies, chemical firms, and such. "It all depends on what kind of lawyer you want to be — big business, small town, tax, or whatever," explained an alumnus.

After a year, one is generally more enthusiastic about going back to school, plus there is the chance to work and save some money for the time in school. On the other side of the coin, the student can talk himself into not going back to school over the course of the year he's working. These factors must be weighed by each individual.

As for holding down a job while in law school, most of the panel advised against working during the first year and getting by on a loan if necessary. Afterwards, however, they felt it was a good idea, especially if the student could land a job with a law firm or in state or local government. This enables the student to make contacts before he graduates and to learn the practicalities of legal work not taught in the classroom.

Frs. Reale, Druhman Direct Development

Father Sante J. Reale has been named director of development and Father Alvin W. Druhman has been named associate director of development at Saint Joseph's College.

Working under the direction of college president Father Charles Banet, both Father Reale and Father Druhman are responsible for portions of the college public relations program and furthering of public interest in Saint Joseph's.

"My duties include general fund-raising, especially with regard to be deferred giving, such as wills, estates and estates and planning," explains Father Reale. Father Druhman's specific duties include working on the Father Gross Fellows Program, a plan under which benefactors can assist the college.

Father Reale underscores the importance of development work. "While annual giving supports Saint Joseph's in its everyday operations, the future of private education depends on stabilized enrollments and sizeable gifts that build up endowments."

REALE

DRUHMAN

Father Druhman says "I enjoy the contacts with the public and am encouraged by the public interest in Saint Joseph's that I have encountered."

Father Reale joined Saint Joseph's staff in 1969 and has previously served as a staff member in the development office as well as executive director of the Alumni Association. Father Druhman joined the college faculty in 1948 and serves as a professor of English and secretary of the college.

NEH Grants $4,809 To Core

Saint Joseph's Core Curriculum recently received a big boost in the form of a $4,809 National Endowment for the Humanities grant, with the money going for several beneficial purposes in Core.

Among these benefits were: the hiring of an expert consultant on the fine arts aspect of Core, and funds for the travel expenses of Saint Joseph's research librarian and two other faculty members to several prominent national museums for the purchase of fine arts slides, films, and reproductions of famous works of art, all of which now aid the Core program.

Dr. John Nichols, Saint Joseph's Core curriculum coordinator, used most of the grant for the hiring of the fine arts consultant, Dr. Jacinto Quirarte, dean of the College of Fine and Applied Arts at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

The money left after the hiring of Dr. Quirarte was used to help pay the travel expenses of Dr. Donald Kreilkamp, Saint Joseph's research librarian, to Indiana University and Washington, D.C., and for Dr. and Mrs. John Egan, who traveled to Washington and New York on behalf of the Core program.

Saint Joseph's money was used for the purchase of various slides, films, and reproductions. The artwork reproductions are seen in the display cases in the Science Building each day.

Second, creative writing by the students concerning the times and lives of certain artists will be encouraged, so that students will become involved in these creative presentations that concern the Middle Ages and the Ancient World.

Third, there will be more emphasis on visual appreciation, rather than the interpretive side of art in general.

Dr. Nichols concludes that "Very simply, more attention and more prominence is being given to the fine arts in Core this year than last. And without the generous assistance of NEH, this benefit to our curriculum would be impossible."

SJC Gridders Tie For Second In HCC

Saint Joseph's football Pumas rode a stiff defense and a nifty passing attack to post a 3-2 Heartland Collegiate Conference record, good for a second-place tie, and a 5-4-1 overall season record in 1978, therefore marking its third straight winning season.

The same defense that stopped arch-rival Valparaiso at the Puma one-yard line to preserve a season-ending 13-7 win over the Crusaders also limited foes to 134.6 yards rushing and 104.1 passing per game — a 238.7 total defense average. In conference play, the Pumas' pass defense led the league with a stingy average of 94.0 yards per game, while allowing 161.6 yards per game rushing to finish third in total defense at 255.6 yards per game.

Linebacker Mark Greiner led the Puma defenders in tackles with 57 solos and 44 assists for a 101 total. In addition, Greiner and free safety John Zaworski led the Puma defense with three interceptions each, while Ralph Waldecki, first-team Academic All-Americn Mike Bettinger, Brian Brennan and end Joe Bezilla also had one interception each for a season total of ten aerial thefts. Greiner and sophomore nose guard Frank Randazzo led the team in fumble recoveries with two each; the team had a total of eight fumble recoveries. Puma defenders tackled the opposition 73 times for losses totaling 334 yards.

Quarterback Mike Houston finished with the largest offensive figures of all Pumas: he completed 101 of 174 passes, good for a .580 completion percentage. That completion

Women's Volleyball Posts 26-12 Record

Saint Joseph's volleyball team finished fourth in the Indiana Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (IAIAW) state volleyball tournament held at Taylor University the weekend of Nov. 11.

Saint Joe, which finished its season with a 26-12 record, was one of eight IAIAW regional winners that competed in the annual two-day state tourney.

"Our team showed poise and confidence all season, which is important in any match, but in tournament competition in particular," says SJC coach Linda Taulman. "Our team hustled and played aggressively all year, and I feel our teamwork and morale was always high."

Members of the women's volleyball team, who finished fourth in the state volleyball championships, are (kneeling, I-r) Leona Fournier, Regina Fisher, Nancy Scott, Jamie Badanish, Mary Ann Klemm, and Sandy Allen. Standing, (I-r) are student manager Terri Vincitore, Vicki Bauer, Linda Deno, Katie Flynn, Peg Versgrove, Stormy Klecka, Ronda Hillenburg, and head coach Linda Taulman.

Puma co-captains in 1978 were Mary Ann Klemm and Leona Fournier, and Klemm is the only player on the team who will be lost to graduation. Mrs. Taulman says other upperclassmen who performed well were Katie Flynn, Regina Fisher and Nancy Scott.

"Naturally, we look forward to the return of our upperclassmen for the 1979 season, but we have to feel that our freshmen will have progressed, too, by virtue of this year's experience," Mrs. Taulman explains.

Even without considering the arrival of freshmen recruits next fall, Mrs. Taulman feels that the blend of experience and relative youth returning to the 1979 team makes the winning of a state title a realistic goal.

Rudy Volz Memorial Trophy winner (Most Valuable Player in annual Homecoming football game) was won by No. 55 James McFadden, a senior environmental science major from Richmond, Va., who is shown here making one of his 15 tackles he had on the day vs. Butler University.

mark set a new school record, eclipsing the old mark of .540 set by Bill Regan in the 1973 season. In addition, Houston is the 1978 Heartland Collegiate Conference passing champion, finishing league play with an average of 12.6 completions per game and a first-place .553 completion percentage, coming on 63 completions in 114 attempts.

Houston's completions totaled 1120 yards and accounted for six touchdowns. His favorite targets were Doug Knutson (26 receptions, 276 yards, three TD's), Larry Shelton (23 receptions, 142 yards, one TD), Duwayne Mill (19 receptions, 195 yards, two TD's), Chuck Sharkey (18 receptions, 262 yards, two TD's) and Al Stupek (18 receptions, 160 yards).

As a team, Saint Joe averaged 159.9 yards per game passing and 97.9 rushing for a pergame average of 257.8. The Pumas netted 979 yards rushing in 312 carries, a 2.3 percarry average, but the SJC defense also limited the foes to a 2.0 per-carry mark.

Mill and Shelton dominated the Puma rushing statistics, with Mill netting 437 yards and scoring four touchdowns on the ground while Shelton netted 379 yards and tallied once.

Mill led all Puma scorers with six touch-downs for 36 points while Ray Banary had one TD, 12 PAT kicks and four field goals for 30 points. Knutson, who caught both scoring passes in the season finale against Valparaiso, finished with four TD's and two conversions by run for 28 points.

Nine Returning Lettermen Spark Puma Cagers' 78-79 Season

Nine lettermen, including six seniors, spell out the major asset for Saint Joseph's basketball Pumas this winter: experience. And coming off last year's 19-8 record, third-year coach George Waggoner looks to the approaching season with guarded optimism.

Waggoner points out that "our experience comes from two sides. Not only are most of our players veterans, but since this is my third year here, I know the players and they know me. Our system of play is established and though we may add a few new wrinkles, wholesale experimentation isn't necessary for us."

Looking to team characteristics for 1978-79, Waggoner says the Pumas are aggressive on defense, but lack the great quickness needed to be an outstanding defensive team. Accordingly, the offense will have to put points on the board, and he feels the offensive punch should indeed be a strong point.

"We have good perimeter shooting in the 15 to 25-foot range and we also have solid rebounding strength," he reports. "I would regard Kevin Sims, Neil Brown, Gerald Kates, Lyle Meyer and Dave Downey as our top shooters, while Dennis Thomas, Jim Michels, Tony Smith and Downey are our leading rebounders.

In Waggoner's system, no special emphasis is placed on a starting five. "The key is we go with the right combination as the game situation demands it."

Waggoner says the Pumas are seeking to accomplish three goals this season: 1. Win the Puma 100 Classic at Saint Joseph's Dec. 8-9; 2. Win the Great Lakes Valley Conference championship; and 3. Earn a berth in the NCAA Division II post-season tournament.

As for the new conference, Bellarmine of Kentucky, Indiana Central, Indiana State-Evansville and Kentucky Wesleyan provide a rough road for the Pumas. But it's also obvious that the team that wins the league title will be taking a giant step toward a spot in the NCAA tourney.
